

Sixains

Chatoyant

Having a changeable luster or color with an undulating band of white light.
Webster's New collegiate Dictionary

I am loosely attached to this planet, choose to dwell in the airways of angels wear a dimmed halo at a tilted angle, wing it, reluctant to touchdown.
 I am an immigrant from the multiverse, live fourteen simultaneous lives.

I am star stuff collaged into flesh, journey this incarnation toward light and love.
I am heavy on the Earth, but prefer lighter weight, escape to ethereal domains in better, vivid dreams or work out trials in ephemeral contrast realms, wake relieved for another chance.

I am in essence a dusty, curious, cosmic spirit who chose this time to play with words who selected carefully family and friends and landscapes with diverse delights, who uses imagination as my guide—somewhat ambivalent about my assignment.

I am supposed to be a dedicated light-worker, seek enlightenment for a transformative shift.
 I am from star-quarks twinkling my soul who darkles with darkness who sparkles with dawn facing sunset with anticipation.
